My brother and sister will be there soon, and I wanted to get my stuff out of there before then. [P]ersely -> i went to the bathroom and when I came back, I thought that there was some woman there, so i called her and when she came, she was so mad that she slapped me in my face. and i said "but i didn't do anything!" she said "you're not from here, you don't know what goes on". (She thought that I was new there, I have been in town for about 2 years, and live with my mom. I don't like my mom, and my cousin and I don't get along very well.) I really think that she was trying to send me a message. (I don't like it here, you don't belong here, and your family isn't "your" family) I really think that the reason she was mad, was because I was at the church on sunday. [P]ersely -> but if she saw me there, she would've been mad at me. [P]ersely -> and then she might've thought that i wasn't really part of the family because i wasn't at the church with my “real” family. (It’s weird because I’m not even a Christian yet.) (People who know me know, that I’m not religious at all, I’m very confused and I don’t know what to believe in. I also think that I’m an atheist.) It’s weird because I’m not even a Christian yet. (I don’t think that it’s a sin. I’m a little confused about what sin actually is.) I just really wanted to know what to do, because I’m new here. (That, and I have to go home to Andy McDonald, the transport secretary, said that “Londoners deserve better” than to be treated as “second class passengers” during the pandemic and that the problems they faced were “not of our making”. Speaking on the BBC’s Today programme, he said: “There is a shortage of staff at London Underground. Even if you’re just trying to help people move through a station, it is a physical and time-consuming thing for them to do. So people are left waiting, people’s journeys are delayed and that is not something we can get our head around.” He added that providing assistance was the right thing to do, and said staff were using the slogan “support not sympathy”. “People will be waiting to get on trains, there is no service, their trains are not going to be there,” he said. “So we need to make sure we
