NMR Relaxation Rate Measurements on a Liquid Crystal Hexagonal Bilayer. Magnetic resonance technology provides a unique tool for probing the microscopic structure of soft condensed matter and investigating its relation to macroscopic order. Among a variety of possible applications are, for example, studies of the ordering of molecules and the orientation of the molecular director inside liquid crystals, dielectric and electro-optic materials. For many applications, the commonly used macroscopic magnetic resonance measurements are not sufficient to probe liquid crystalline order on the micrometer length scale. Instead, complementary microscopic information can be obtained by NMR. Here we discuss the basic NMR techniques that are used to measure relaxation times of liquid crystal samples. We present the implementation of methods to measure such NMR relaxation times in a liquid crystal host and demonstrate the data obtained. We illustrate the general use of NMR to determine the average molecular orientation of liquid crystals in the presence of a magnetic field. Q: Will Jews of the future remember a long ago Jew? I'm not really sure the way the question is phrased but I think it's the basic idea. A: This is a special question but I'll try to answer it anyway. It's true that in a particular generation, some people would remember some of the Jewish heroes of the past. But there are two problems with this. The first one is that "some" or "not all" of the people that are usually remembered, will not be remembered

I have finally found my one and only--that one man who I can marry and have a life with. I've been married before--and I have to say the divorce was one of the hardest things I have had to go through in my life. I just wish I had known then what I know now. I wish I would have thought of things then that would have made it easier for us. But we never know. I don't like to think about the past and the things we did when we weren't on our best behavior--because it makes me really sick inside. But now, I know this will never happen again. I am secure in my marriage today. I know today that I will have a man in my life forever. His name is Joseph. He is a very nice man. He can be sweet and funny. He seems to really love me and only me. I can see that in his eyes. He is a wonderful man. There is no one else I want in my life. There is no one else I could spend the rest of my life with. He has made me his wife for life. He is my man and I love him and only him. Its been hard for me to admit it, because this is a new thing for me. I have always tried to be "fearless" in relationships. I have tried to be the one in control. I have tried to make my man my
