Do not edit, copy, and paste sections of any program below! 3.7 Mar 2014 [Source: software.theblaze.com] Tray-HQ - GUI Software Review Tray-HQ is a free app from the HOMU GmbH group of apps that strives to make your life easier. With a computer on your desk, multiple activities can be performed, considering you install the right set of tools to fit your task description. This can simply mean time management, with an abundance of tools in this regard. For instance, Tray-HQ can quietly stay in the tray area, and help you work with a calendar, notepad, stopwatch, clipboard saver, and more. Lightweight, and easy to use One of the main advantages is that it doesn't take you through a setup process, thus giving you the liberty to store it on a USB flash drive to carry around, and use on other computers besides your own. Don't worry about stability, because system registry entries are not modified to make the application work. On launch, the application minimizes to the tray area, but with no prompt, or tooltip message to let you know it's there. Interacting with the icon brings up a panel with different tabs, each holding specific functions for operations involving a calendar, notepad, stop time, clipbook, address book, and calculator. Calendar and notes, clipboard manager and calculator The calendar is shown in a simple layout, with navigation controls to jump through months, years, or simply select different days. Additionally, notes can be added in each date, but the text can't be exported directly to file, nor can you set up an alarm. Writing in the Notepad component is equivalent to

Tray-HQ

Tray-HQ is a small utility for Windows that helps you to time manage your everyday tasks with some of the most convenient features. It is a useful suite that will save you time, protect your privacy, and provide you with the tools you need, no matter if you are a beginner or a seasoned user. Tray-HQ gives you access to a variety of tasks, directly on your desktop. With Tray-HQ, you can, for example: Communicate via chat or text by creating chat rooms; Create or open groups with which to tag your contacts or folders; Send files, images, or just links to other users; Write or print text, including lengthy descriptions or comments; Send things in seconds, for instance, entering your email address, and get a notification of the invitation in your email; Access a page, file, or image in a specified folder; Avoid wasting time manually saving copies and sending them all over the place; See calendar, clock, and even to-do lists; See how much time you have before deciding to take a break; Receive real-time alerts of specific events, without constantly having to check an application; Leave messages for your friends. Many other features are available, but the features mentioned above are the ones that will impress anyone with their simplicity. Furthermore, Tray-HQ is so small that it can fit in the system tray, making it very easy to manage. It is also possible to get Tray-HQ to work on Mac and Linux, so if you are the type of person that wants to run it on multiple computers, that will not be a problem, either. The program is completely free of charge, and the functionality is not hidden in the menus. Rather, Tray-HQ is intended to work in the most effective and convenient way possible for everyone, helping to achieve the best results. TrayHQ takes you back to the good old days where you had to keep a separate notepad, timer, and clipboard for each application. The developer, Emily S, has developed TrayHQ for the purpose of time management and quick note taking. For this, she has used the formatting and structure of earlier programs of this type. This is why the program is called TrayHQ, rather than just being Tray. The program uses drag and drop to organize the information when it is needed. Many operations are grouped together into a single icon, making it
