October 8, 2012 - Hacking Windows Genuine Advantage Notification has always seemed easy to crackers because every time Microsoft released a new WGA to counter it. This was at a time when most programs required activation. The problem is that now activation becomes available without activation. To do this, just go to "Apps and features" and select "Authentication". You will see a window that asks for your permission to authenticate. You must allow it for it to work if you don't want to. By default, Windows always asks you to allow it, and it also allows and authenticates. But you can turn it off.
