Justice News More than 1,500 People Separately Charged for Shipping Fentanyl, Other Dangerous Drugs Across the United States and Canada WASHINGTON – Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) Acting Administrator Uttam Dhillon issued the following statement on the recent interdictions of large quantities of fentanyl and other dangerous drugs in Hawaii, New York,

Michigan, Ontario, and Québec: “This production and distribution network will significantly worsen the fentanyl crisis in our country. We do not have the capacity to stop every one of these transnational criminal networks, but by working together with our Canadian and Mexican partners, we are making tremendous headway.” Organized drug trafficking, often in partnership with violent criminals, has rapidly increased during the past two decades. Drug trafficking is a major source of lethal poisons, including fentanyl and fentanyl analogs, that are making the U.S. opioid epidemic worse. Fentanyl has been identified as a public health threat because it is at least 50 times more potent than heroin and that can result in deadly overdoses. DEA is engaged with our international partners to fight a series of transnational criminal networks that span several countries and continents. Over the past three years, DEA’s major task forces, working closely with law enforcement from Canada, Mexico, and New Zealand, have been able to penetrate and dismantle several transnational networks that produced illicit drugs, including illicit fentanyl. Law enforcement removed more than 2,600 kg of illicit fentanyl, more than 680 kg of methamphetamine, more than 1,800 kg of MDMA and more than 11,000 kg of cocaine from across the Northern Triangle region of Central America. Our partners in Central America and in the Caribbean have also supported the removal of large quantities of illicit fentanyl from other drug trafficking networks operating in the United States and South America. DEA also works with the United States Coast Guard and the Canadian Coast Guard to intercept small ships and interdict dangerous drugs. During a 12-day enforcement sweep in August, the U.S. Coast Guard and Canadian Coast Guard seized 2,041 kg of illicit drugs, including more than 100

Bevacizumab is an anti-angiogenic monoclonal antibody targeting vascular endothelial growth factor. Recently, its administration was reported to have some adverse effects, such as tissue destruction, mucosal lesions, or wound healing disorder. We report here a case of advanced epithelial ovarian cancer and achalasia-like state after bevacizumab treatment. The land of the rising sun is a fascinating place where the tea is consumed from a traditional Japanese tea pot called a chasen. Tea is a Japanese tradition that was introduced in the 1500s by Chinese traders in Japan. Nowadays, it is an integral part of Japanese culture and has grown in popularity around the world. Japan is home to thousands of tea schools, a wide variety of tea from over 30 classes of tea and around 700 different species of tea plants grown in a wide variety of areas. The range of single varieties of tea from Japan is also phenomenal. When ordering your tea in a chasen, it is customary to order by the Sencha classification. Classifying and grading the Japanese tea isn't something new, but this method helps not only to sort the tea into different grades, but also to put together a range of tea in a gift set. What is Sencha? The classification of Japanese tea is based on the geology of the area where the tea is grown. The differing geography, climate, environmental factors and other aspects of their natural environment lead to differences in the appearance, taste and fragrance of the tea leaves. The geology refers to the surrounding terrain of the tea plant. The classification is based on the geology of the soil, weather, seasonality, and proximity to the sea. The surrounding geography can be described as the tea growing environment. Sencha is a time-honoured tradition and before modern technology, it was time-consuming and
