I use a local Jenkins and a Artifactory on the same machine. I just want the Jenkins to build one or more project in Artifactory, and then push the binaries to a remote server, then Artifactory will store all the binaries. I don't use any other Jenkins users account, is it possible? Do I need to upgrade Jenkins just to build the projects in Artifactory? Thank you. A: Jenkins is the master, Artifactory is the slave. Both have to be configured in a central place and Jenkins needs to keep track of what is being built on Artifactory. You could probably have Jenkins configured to build the artefacts in Artifactory using the git flow tool, but I would recommend to use a dedicated Jenkins user to manage the configuration of the slave. If you can, it is probably best to have your build agent setup as a remote to Artifactory and have it pull down the artifacts and build them there. If you have 1 build agent only, you can use the local-to-local feature to build
