Since AutoCAD Crack Mac R2014, the SubToolbox is not used for storing files. They are accessible via the Command bar The object-oriented user interface (UI) was replaced with the ribbon bar, introduced in AutoCAD R2009 and AutoCAD LT 2009. User interaction with features are displayed in a small panel at the bottom of the screen. The ribbon bar is organized into groups, which are arranged in order of the extent of use. Groups are further arranged by object type and subject matter. AutoCAD provides a method to manage blocks. User interface AutoCAD includes a command bar on the bottom of the screen, typically accessed with the mouse, which has additional functionalities that are not accessible with the program. The tools of the command bar include: The mouse The standard mouse can be used for drawing and measurement. It includes a scrolling wheel, a left-right scroll wheel, and 3-D scroll wheels for rotation and zoom. A double-click turns the currently selected element into a block, and a left-click turns the block into a selected element. An alternate selection mode can be enabled by clicking and holding the Shift key. The Shift key can be used for locking or unlocking the selected element, and can be used to toggle the lock between the last selection and the current selection. In both cases, the click can be on the unselected element, but is limited to objects that the user is authorized to modify (unlocked element), or the part of the element that is being modified (locked element). For example, if an element is locked and the mouse click is made on the element, the element will be modified in all directions. If the mouse click is on the locked element itself, the element will be modified along the axis perpendicular to the point of the mouse click. The keyboard The keyboard includes arrow keys and many special keys that are used for navigation, editing, transformation, and other actions. The arrow keys move the insertion point in the current workspace direction. Ctrl+F is used to switch to the first page in the drawing file that is loaded. Ctrl+R (type "Restore") reloads the drawing file without opening it. This is typically used when the drawing file has been changed or corrupted, and the AutoCAD history list indicates that a reload is needed. Ctrl+O (type "Open") opens a file or draws a block (from the object list). ca3bfb1094
