What's new in Beat Saber - Wavezswavesz - Quot;While We're Young Quot;:

The Bond You Can't Break One of the most memorable parts of last month's Hallowed Night's Survivors (HNS) makes its way into the HNS: the Paladin Tier cap was increased from 20 to 30 million to provide the new adventure a fair shake. This is good in many ways and particularly for this dungeon which was originally designed as a very unique collection of separate parts but after four months of balance testing is making decent use of that solo viability without doing anything overly underhanded. That said, it needs a few more tools to make it a really great challenge which isn't against the theme (who would want to repeat an epic base-game event more than once?) or the tier (30 million is fairly scarce in the HNS universe.) I decided to put forth two, the first of which I'll focus on helping it run efficiently with the still-identical set, and the second of which I'll demonstrate with the new set. Balance Before anything else, we need to have some new content to balance against. This build establishes a baseline with appropriate amounts of scrubs/monsters and shrooms. Instead of just hitting the tier cap, we assign shards to each encounter to see how it varies from the starting point. I pulled this sample as a JSON file off the free online server if you want to play around with it yourself.
