Published by the Bing Ads team, Bing Ads Editor is a professional marketing tool from Microsoft. It was designed to be an offline version of the Internet Advertising Management Service, which is a service offered by Bing Ads, Microsoft's partner for pay-per-click advertising. The software allows you to monitor your keywords, campaigns, ads and ad groups, as well as perform budget and inventory adjustments. It's particularly useful when you're offline and want to be notified of any campaign updates, even after you've left home. Bing Ads Editor is a feature-rich tool that can help you organize campaigns, adjust your online marketing efforts and give you a good basis for comparison. It helps you set up a campaign to maximize your yield and is quite easy to use. As you know, Bing Ads has two business models: pay-per-click and cost-per-conversion. The program can be used in both modes, though we recommend only using cost-per-conversion, because it's much simpler and better organized. One of the first things you'll notice as you start using Bing Ads Editor is that it enables you to create ad groups, which you then use to manage your ad groups. This is a very important tool if you're a publisher; and it's also great if you're the publisher who manages the ads for your clients. The program can import your campaign data from Bing Ads, Google AdWords or FeedBurner; and it also allows you to sync your account data from these two providers. Another good feature of this program is its search capabilities; you can set the requirements for your ads, and the tool will help you find the keywords that match those requirements. There are various options for setting up the ad conditions; you can select the ones that you want to track and display ads based on them. Bing Ads Editor provides detailed reports about keyword searches and, as a result, can help you easily find the keywords that best match your goals, using different techniques. The program also gives you an updated overview of your online campaigns, with information such as the number of impressions, clicks and conversions. Here are some other useful features: •

You can set up ad rotation by day or by hour. • The program will help you determine which campaigns to cancel. • Create campaigns, ad groups and ad extensions. • Track your clicks. • Set up cost-per-click and cost-per-conversion campaigns. • Manage your clients and their budgets
