Goals on the way to the final frontier 2 years, 1 month ago Welcome to 2019 and my personal goals for the year! In 2018 I changed my career to design and print production. It wasn't an easy transition. The burning ambition of a designer who can create and knows what it feels like to make my own mark on the field comes with a strong ambition to prove my knowledge and skills. After 3 years of working within a technological and mechanised industry I felt at odds with myself. I finally decided to jump on the trendy tech train and do a 21 week journey down the path of the digital designer - bringing my own skills up to scratch and testing myself in print design from concept to print to distribution. A funny thing happened in the middle: I fell in love. I fell in love with making and seeing my designs on paper and metal. When I'm in love with what I'm making, it feels good. And when I felt good I got busy with my goals. Goals I made to pass by. Goals I fell out of love with. Goals which were unrealistic that only one person in the whole world could achieve. I wanted to reach the top of this industry. I wanted to put myself as a leading name in the industry and make a one in a million success. When I finally realised that I couldn't get there without a basic understanding of design, I wanted to learn it. I wanted to understand the history of typography, illustration and a multitude of other design disciplines. Before I started working in the industry that's how I spent my time - studying. I'm certain that it's helped me attain the knowledge I need for this ever-changing and exciting industry. Today I'm striving to get even further down the checklist. Beyond knowing how to make websites and design brochures, I want to be a web and mobile developer. I understand that there's a large gap between knowing how to design and printing something and publishing it digitally - so I've started a blog

What's new:

At this stage in development, the release date and title were not determined. We will announce the details of the game in the near future.

A rather small number of people know that the developer is from the United States.

Scenarios have been mapped out by Samantha Netta, a skilled script writer, designer, and producer in the US, who has also made a name for herself for her game writing. Ms. Netta said in an interview that the localisation and QoL were approached by a US company, but she and the US company did not want to consider a joint work as an independent developer.

Speaking to Polygon, Samantha Netta said that Atlus USA could not be considered a stranger to the game. In order to make the project work out, the two parties have forged a good relationship, and collaboration was achieved using a strategy of innovation. But she also pointed out that Atlus USA did not enter the project until 1.0. These days, it would be common for a AAA publisher to introduce a game. The two parties worked on the game most of the time during the joint development of the scenario.

According to Samantha Netta, the Atlus US team really like the work the creator, and are very excited for its release. Samantha Netta will be joining the in-house QA team for the game. The project took about two years.

It is an exciting and interesting project.

But maybe you don't want to wait for that release date, because Atlus US is currently hard at work on another title. It was previously announced that they are working on titles like Fortuna and Catherine: Full Body.

And it is not over, they have confirmed that the two will be co-produced. So we will also be getting two titles in one year. And also, Atlus USA is developing a mobile game, and they are working on a large scale game with a Disney IP. So in the future, we will also have a trailer like this.

So we will keep you updated on their future development.

Sharing! A rather small number of people know that the developer is from the United States.
