Turbo Tunnel is a 540-metre-long underground railway tunnel in Edinburgh's New Town, connecting the Surgeons' Hall (where the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh is based) with Dean Village, Newhaven (where the Lodge Street seamark was), the Scottish Exhibition and Conference Centre and Edinburgh Waverley railway station. It is situated beneath an east-west street, Pavilion Close, which runs between the New College Tower and Academy Avenue, edging the rear of the final building of the transept of New College, New College Chapel. This line of underground railway was opened in 1983 and is electrified third-rail for electric trains. Even though it is predominantly used by passengers, this line also serves important freight uses, for example, it is one of three sections of the Edinburgh Tram Network (the other two being the Tram and MetroCity Lines) that is used to import and export Edinburgh and UK manufactured goods.

Geography History The former Caledonian Railway, under the management of William Burnand and Sir William Arrol, built the tunnel using the excavators, Hadfield Ltd, with the LV110 digging through soil that was already established to be around 10 metres (34 feet) deep. This first phase of the tunnel took from August 1969 to February 1970, and cost £1,176,000, including over £315,000 spent on the ventilation system (which was to maintain a negative pressure) and over £225,000 spent on the foundations for the sides of the tunnel, had taken a maximum of 2,000 hours over two years. Part of the completion celebrations was the Procession by 400 Engineers on March 7, 1970, followed by a Celebration Ball on March 21, 1970. It took 41 trains to carry passengers for the first time on 25 March 1983, and the three original stations open for passengers were Newhaven, Dean Village and Edinburgh Waverley. During and before the construction, there had been a number of discussions about using a link underground. Neither the Caledonian Railway nor the LNER however, were willing to use a tunnel in these circumstances since their short-haul railways would be unable to use it. Also, the Royal Commonwealth

Society was unwilling to take a risk on a tunnel that may well have never been completed. This led to a referendum being held on Newhaven with 50% of the voters in support of the proposal; however, this resulted in a vote against

The Fostering Apocalypse is a game about society. You are Todo, a man in the middle of a catastrophic event. A plague has broken out in the city, and you have been entrusted with the journey to look for medicine for it. But what you find isn't quite what you had expected... Game Features: An entire universe to explore, filled with incredible graphics and design An immersive and beautiful soundtrack by acclaimed composer Ian Laurence Multi-layered narrative; as you advance in the game you discover new information about the story of the world An original storyline that unfolds and evolves based on your actions A story-driven open world, where decisions and consequence ripple out through the world An immersive and beautiful story, with multiple endings A unique and challenging gameplay system A danger to the world and to humanity The Fostering Apocalypse is the type of game which you can still enjoy today. It is an emotionally powerful game that makes you reflect on what is happening and how you can make a difference. With a modern aesthetic, a melancholic and haunting soundtrack, the game successfully builds a full and immersive world. The action systems are not intuitive, as the player needs to explore and discover their significance themselves, but the content is undeniably brilliant. It is hard to recall a game like Fostering Apocalypse, and that shows that the original deserves more visibility. Gacha Gacha Gacha!!! Harajuku Girls' Gacha!! There's no better gacha game than

Gacha Gacha Gacha! Our own Akiyoshi provided a demo preview and her opinion: 'My first impression of Gacha Gacha Gacha!!! is that it feels a lot like a more experienced 'chibby' title. Meaning, the concept of 'picking stuff up' is already familiar to the player, and the gacha mechanic feels like a quick shortcut to a new stage of the game. The mechanic of continuously clearing stages is also not new to the Gacha game genre. However, as a Gacha game, you can pick stuff up randomly each time you play. In the demo, there was a long-awaited Harajuku Girls theme that I was excited to collect (I definitely should have bought a ticket to the Japan Expo, but since we didn't have time we did the next best thing and downloaded the demo. I am already so glad I did this
