com.hurlant.util Class BitSink BitSink is a simple class that takes a stream of bytes and appends bits to them. (Warning: the API is missing serious functionality; don't use this if you actually need to read a file of bits!) /Write an int to the BitSink with at most 32 bits of precision. /Reads in the next int from the BitSink. /Returns the actual number of bits read. /Does not allocate any memory. /Does not throw exceptions. /Can be used as a self closing file, if so, the output files writes end with \r . /The bit stream is always assumed to be in big endian format, i.e. starts with the least significant bit (in memory and on disk). void setBit(BitSink& sink, unsigned int bit, unsigned int); unsigned int getBit(BitSink& sink); unsigned int getBits(BitSink& sink, unsigned int count); Chowmere, South Australia Chowmere is a suburb in Adelaide in the City of Unley. At the 2016 Census, Chowmere had a population of Chowmere was originally part of the suburb of Greenhill, and was planned as part of that Greenhill Rural Council, established in October 1892. Greenhill Rural Council included the areas of Greenhill, Greenside, Stonyfell, Blyth, Beaumont and Picnic Point. Chowmere House was established on 1 August 1912 by land reclamations on the southern side of Chowmeringa Creek near the present day Greenhill Primary School. Chowmere was named after a block of land subdivided by Cowan's Land and Investment Company in August 1912. The first lots were sold on 18 October 1912. So far, new coach Mike Babcock has used four systems, each with a different look. There were five systems last year. It looks as though Babcock will stick with the same basic look for much of this season, as the Leafs have been slow to switch things up. While it can be frustrating for fans to see that change

Oncolytic herpes simplex virus-1 encoding interleukin-12 with survivin. Herpes simplex virus (HSV)-1 infection has the potential to be an oncolytic tumor agent, because HSV is highly selective for dividing cells and of the few viruses that have been tested, it has the highest tumor selectivity in vitro and in vivo. In this study we tested the oncolytic efficacy of an oncolytic HSV, which expresses an active immunomodulator, survivin, to enhance host immunosurveillance against cancer cells. The concept behind this research was to explore whether co-inoculation of a tumor cell with two viral oncolytics, one against tumor cells and the other against immunosurveillance of cancer cells, will synergistically enhance the oncolytic effects of both agents. Our results showed that survivin and HSV-1 can synergistically inhibit cell proliferation in human cervical cancer cells, HeLa, and one squamous cell carcinoma cell line, FaDu, in a lytic manner. Synergistic effects of treatment with the two oncolytic viruses were also observed in terms of tumor growth and mouse survival in vivo.John McGrail John A.
