Central venous catheterization is performed for administration of drugs, fluid resuscitation, parenteral nutrition and blood transfusion. Catheterization is generally performed by the chest, the subclavian or the internal jugular vein. It is often performed using ultrasound guidance. The major complications observed are pneumothorax and hemothorax. During the years 1988 to 1998, 144 cases of complications of central venous catheterization were reported in French literature. The complications were present at day-1 of the catheterization or later and serious or moderate. Mostly cases of pneumothorax and of arterial puncture were reported. We present a new case of pneumothorax due to a posterolateral internal jugular catheterization. The most frequent complications of central venous catheterization are reviewed.Determination of rate-constant: elucidation of method of dose calculation of ZnO in commercial non-violet LED-fluorescent lamps.
