It lies approximately south-west of Miejsce Piastowe, north of Kłobuck, and north of the regional capital Katowice. The village has a population of 1,946. History Its first mention was in 1598. After World War I in the Upper Silesia plebiscite 288 out of 310 voters in Wola Krzyżna voted in favour of joining Poland, against 38 opting for staying in Germany. Afterwards the village became a part of Jelcz-Laskowice, a municipality within Silesian Voivodeship, and it was annexed by Nazi Germany at the beginning of World War II. After the war the region was restored to Poland. References Category:Villages in Kłobuck CountyQ: Using Java threads to change the state of a button In my program I have a JFrame with a JButton. When the button is pressed I want to change the state of the button to "pressed". I thought I could do this by starting a new thread and calling.setEnabled(false) on the button, but that doesn't seem to work. It doesn't seem to be a problem that I have an int variable called state that is used to change the button's state because I've tried moving that code outside the thread and it still didn't work. I know that there is a problem with the thread interfering with other parts of the application because when I click the button it does seem to execute the code I want and the state should be changed, but not the text

A: Some users had the same problem. And I faced it too. Try changing the extension from.rar to.zip. Native vitamin E and procyanidins in selected Hypericum species. The in vitro antioxidative potential of two native Hypericum species was evaluated. The total phenolic (TP) extract of H. perforatum showed an approximate 5.5-fold higher mean TP concentration compared to H. perforatum extracts. Both species demonstrated an antioxidative effect that was shown by their radical scavenging activity in relation to their phenolic content. The stronger scavenging activity was found for H. perforatum. The results show a strong influence of the origin of the plant material on the antioxidative potential. 1291-E, a 4,5-dihydro-5,5-diphenyl-3(2H)-pyridazinone, has the structural formula: 1291-E may be prepared by known methods (see, e.g., PCT/US2013/050452). It has been shown to be a potent, selective, and orally active sigma ligand (see, e.g., U.S. patent application Ser. No. 13/747,370). It has also been shown to exhibit improved tolerability in clinical trials in comparison to that of rimcazole. It is desirable to have improved methods of preparing 1291-E. Abnormal mitochondrial respiratory chain function in patients with Type 2 diabetes mellitus. There is a growing body of evidence that Type 2 diabetes mellitus (T2DM) results from or is closely related to mitochondria. Since the activity of mitochondrial respiratory chain (RC) is essential for a normal cellular metabolism, we aimed to investigate the mitochondrial RC complexes activities in T2DM. The activities of five mitochondrial RC complexes were measured spectrophotometrically in the skeletal muscle biopsy samples obtained from 20 T2DM patients and 20 age- and gender-matched healthy subjects. Maximal activities of complexes I and V were significantly decreased (by 18.5 and 13.6%, respectively) whereas the activities of complexes II, III, and IV were within the normal ranges ( $P > .05$ ). Moreover, a strong correlation was found between the activities of complexes II, III, and IV, indicating an intra- and/or inter-complex regulation of RC activities. No significant changes in RC activities were found in the liver
