 Huge thank you to: All Seeing Eye Entertainment Inc. Q: How to detect if a Activity is running for particular user on Android I am doing a project on Android. I am doing login procedure which will check if the activity is open for particular user. I tried using ActivityInfo info = getPackageManager().getActivityInfo(getPackageName(),0);. This code returns List of all Activities but the one of particular user. My requirement is to get all the opened activities for particular user. I have heard that there is some other way to find this out. Is there any way to know if a particular Activity is open for a particular user? A: There is no API to find out if a particular Activity is open for a particular user. The way to do it is to get the list of all activities and query for the Activity with the user id associated with it. If you need to detect this from a background thread you can just call onPause() / onStop() once the user logs out. Or alternatively, use a database table, add an ID/userid pair to each logged in user activity and invalidate the session once the user logs out. 2 In a Rule 20(c) motion the court may examine the complaint and may in its discretion dismiss the action without prejudice to the plaintiff's right to file an identical action in the proper federal court or to proceed with the action already filed. 3 The state court might also consider such factors as the order in which the claims arose and the number of defendants in the federal court action. See Grosz v. Spear, Bigelow & Morgan, 385 F.Supp. 1002, 1006-07 (D.Conn.1974) 4 The court might also consider whether the purpose of the earlier action was to avoid the statute of limitations or whether the claims had become frivolous. Cf. Lovelace v. Dall, supra, 508 F.2d at 202; Wolgin v. Simon, 398 F.2d 730, 732 (2d Cir. 1968); Moore's Federal Practice P 0.164 (2d ed. 1974) 5 Arguably, for purposes of convenience, the state suit might have been brought against Allstate, Allstate's agent and the individual defendant, rather than against one individual and the corporate agents. Whether such filing against

Can this be the way to deal with it? What I'm doing is the following: class MyABSTRACTClass { public string StringProperty {get; set;} } class MyClass1 : MyABSTRACTClass { } class MyClass2 : MyABSTRACTClass { } After reading this I've decided to create an instance of MyABSTRACTClass using Activator.CreateInstance, and this is what I did: MyABSTRACTClass abc; MyClass1 c1 = (MyClass1)Activator.CreateInstance(typeof(MyClass1).Assembly.GetType("MyNamespace.MyClass1")); MyClass2 c2 = (MyClass2)Activator.CreateInstance(typeof(MyClass2).Assembly.GetType("MyNamespace.MyClass2")); The thing is: I don't want to create it as MyClass1 or MyClass2. I want it to be created as MyClass. I tried several types, for example: MyABSTRACTClass.MyClass and MyABSTRACTClass.MyAbstract but none of them worked. I'm beginning to think that this has to do with the abstract classes not being subclasses. I'm not sure, it's just a thought I had. I'm really a beginner at this, any help is appreciated. Thanks. A: You can use the Activator.CreateInstance overload that takes a Type parameter as long as you pass the right type of the parameter. As you say, the assembly parameter shouldn't work, but you can pass the type as a System.Type c9d1549cdd

Own All Hit All Her Own is a series of six compilation albums released by the band Winger, featuring their singles released between 1989 and 1994. All of the covers depicted in the album cover were scanned from the original records, the vinyl releases of some songs also featured the original covers. All of the covers for these albums were created by Winger guitarist Paul Gilbert. Reception All Hit All Her Own received positive reviews from critics. Allmusic gave a positive review, giving it three stars out of five. The website writes, "All of his albums contain some of the best songs on the radio, and this compilation is no exception." Singles "Reach for the Sky" was the first single from the album, released in November 1989. The single proved to be a moderate success, reaching number 29 on the Billboard Modern Rock Tracks chart. A fringe conference meeting called for a "return to innocence" of online contributions in the wake of the Alistair Carmichael and Chris Huhne controversies. A motion to back an immediate end to all allegations of wrongdoing linked to MPs' expenses was defeated, as delegates reacted angrily to the details of the accounting breakdown in the Huhne scandal. Despite a majority of about 4,000 against, a resolution calling for the end of all parliamentary inquiries into MPs' expenses was defeated by 300 votes to 237. A majority of about 70 voted for the new clause to be tabled in Parliament. Simon Hughes, a former deputy prime minister, was heckled by angry former MPs as the sole Liberal Democrat supporter of the motion from his party's membership at the gathering in Doncaster. He shouted of the investigation into the behaviour of MPs, led by deputy prime minister Nick Clegg, that it was being "slew under the rug" and "far too intrusive". Mr Hughes said the investigation, led by Henry Handloff QC, was "unacceptable". Members of
