Pawn Deals of the Chicago Climate Summit (May 7, 2010) By Anna Negron Saturday, June 28th, 2010 Last Saturday, Bloomberg could be seen battling a pack of wolves in the U.S. Capitol Rotunda. An Orca could be seen swishing her tail against her sister. And over by the plaques, dozens of bald eagles pecked on the bones of a moose as if it was going to eat them all. The pigeons? They made an appearance, but they were too busy wooing each other to show any interest in the buzzing, humming, and rustling going on around them. On the pavement under their feet, beggar Jim Wilson from the black community of Woodlawn kept clicking his tongue, asking for donations. A short, balding older gentleman pretended not to notice him. At a nearby table, our security officer spoke and waved a bill at the man who was on the phone, as if to tell him that he was taking care of the situation. He ignored him, put a business card in his pocket, and then the whole group seemed to fade out of existence as if the man was dissolving into a puff of dust. I stood at the beginning of the lobby where a woman tried to explain the problems in our inner-city neighborhoods to me, but I was mostly just listening to a dog barking at the security guard in front of me. He would periodically mosey over to the woman and attempt to tell her, politely, what was going on. The way he looked at her, you'd think she was an idiot, and I started to agree with him. He was a man of the divine right of some kind, and I'm not quite sure what. He seemed to know what he was talking about from the beginning. He was friendly, but unruffled in his demeanor, and polite without a need to be. He seemed to care

What are these? And why do they keep popping up? Is that a bear? The bear appears in Door Kickers, and is quite a klutz. In the upcoming sequel, Door Kickers 2, it is a smarter, meaner bear. Watch out for him in Door Kickers 2, coming to Steam in February. Overview Door Kickers Original Soundtrack is the soundtrack for Door Kickers, a tactical simulation released for PC in late 2013. It was a Rock Paper Shotgun Game of the Year and Bestest Best Tactics of 2014. Credits George Vlad composed and arranged the original soundtrack, also composing most of the music for Door Kickers 2, which is being released in 2016. Genres The composer is a fan of various genres of music, including: Composed for PC, Door Kickers has a music rating of 7, in comparison to 6 for Door Kickers 2. Music George Vlad's musical style, as defined by the composer himself, ranges from: Narrowing it down to single musical styles, he admits to some influence from: The Door Kickers soundtrack includes tracks of each of the 3 classes, as defined in the game: Officer, Class 1: while primarily focused on using melee weapons, Officer Class 1 can use their sidearm to put down their foe. Specialist, Class 2: their weapon of choice is a shotgun. Infantry, Class 3: they use assault rifles, so they can easily fend off several Officer class 1 enemies. Small Arms Weapons A number of small arms are available to the user. Shotguns, including pump, semi-auto and autoloaders, are available to both Specialist and Officer. Both the sidearm and shotgun can also be used with pistols. Pistols Pistols are not available to either specialist or officer as primary or secondary weapons, yet they are available as long range weapons. Since officer is allowed to use their sidearm, pistols are available to the officer. In contrast, specialist is unable to use their sidearm, leaving them to use pistols. Handguns A number of handguns are available to the user. Assault rifles can fire two or more shots per burst, making it possible to empty magazines in high-intensity combat. The most common type of handgun used in Door Kickers is the Heckler and Koch VP70. However, the player

Design In June 2012 my sisters and I undertook a European research project called RISPERD. It was commissioned by the European Commission and was designed as a way to understand how the growth of chip design is changing in Europe. The project's aim was to understand what the micro-electronics industry in the Netherlands has been doing since the millennium as well as why certain companies and countries across the continent are advancing in the history of microelectronics. We were a group of six mid-career professionals from diverse backgrounds, a mix of academic, industry and government connections, with an ambition to understand the key players and forces driving chip design in Europe. Before studying the industry, I was a Royal Military Academy Sandhurst student and later a Royal Engineers officer. From 2003, I worked for the Defence Design Unit and Information Systems Unit at the Ministry of Defence, before working with Sheffield Hallam University on a project looking at design development in the defence electronics industry. From there, I joined the industry side, eventually joining Izic Ltd in 2007. After RISPERD was completed my sister continued her research further, expanding the project into the advanced technology industry. This is how we landed up at All About Circuits, an independent industry PR consultancy. We're not your standard independent industry PR group. We're interested in things that are technical, from chip design to robotics, to electronics. We work with engineers who are passionate about making things happen. "This makes us really competent at helping these companies [in Europe] take the next step." As such, our background helps us get to the core of chips. First of all, chip design is revolutionising modern life. From smartphones, to e-readers, we've watched as our lives are increasingly dominated by smaller, more power-efficient and clever digital products. This makes us really competent at helping these companies [in Europe] take the next step. This probably sounds really basic, but then this is the sort of thing that All About Circuits helps our clients achieve. Show them something amazing; they'll give you a story. Make something tangible, and the impact you have will impress those around you. We had a great time working on RISPERD and are excited about how we can help chip companies grow in Europe. ... we will always be able to buy iPhones. European chip design has come a long way
